Albino alligator hatches at US' Florida reptile park for the third year in a row

A hatchling from Florida's US, announced the hatchling of an albino alligator for the third year in a row. Wild and Florida Wildlife Center Park in Fort Pierce announced that it will hatch eight more eggs. The baby's parents, a male and female, are also albino. However, the hatchling is not albino. The park said it is the only location in the world to successfully breed albino alligators. The recent hatchling was the third year that the albino parents have had an albino baby.

BIZARRE?

Albino alligator hatches at US' Florida reptile park for the third year in a row

A Florida alligator park announced the hatching of an albino alligator for the third year in a row. World Florida Alligator & Gator Park in Kissimmee announced that still holds eight more eggs. The baby's parents, Spunkie and Blizzard, are also albino, meaning their babies are almost guaranteed to be albino. The park said it is the only location in the world to successfully breed albino alligators. The recent hatching marked the third year that the albino parents have had an albino baby.
